

Cooperative Preschools

Cooperative preschools affiliated with a community college are a well-regarded way to create community and connection for growing families in our area. These preschools provide ongoing parent education as well as providing early learning for babies, toddlers and preschoolers. Parents are deeply engaged with and involved with their child's classroom as volunteers who work with a classroom teacher and the community college with which they are affiliated.

The following lists Co-op Preschools affiliated with local community colleges. Offerings at the preschools may change, so this list is not exhaustive, and private cooperatives also exist.

North Seattle Community College offers Co-op Preschools in many Seattle neighborhoods. Read their overview here <https://northseattlecoops.org/enrollment/how-coop-works> to understand how co-ops work, including roles and responsibilities, and links to scholarship and registration information. Note that many cooperative preschools are located in community locations, including churches, but are not affiliated with them.
